PSHE including RSE

- statement of intent

It is our intention that when children leave Drayton Junior School, they will do so with a well-rounded, balanced view of the world, which encourages them to contribute positively to the local and wider community. At Drayton Junior School we believe in developing and empowering each child as an individual and aim for our personal, social and health education (PSHE) curriculum to play a pivotal role in this.

We recognise the importance of good health and wellbeing, social skills and mental health awareness. Through the whole school delivery of the Jigsaw scheme, together with our 'Caring School' values, we believe that we equip our pupils with good social skills, emotional literacy and an understanding of British values. Our relationship and sex education (RSE) enables our children to learn how to be safe, and to understand and develop healthy relationships, both now and in their future lives.

PSHE also provides opportunities for pupils to reflect on their own identity, values and purpose, fostering empathy, respect and gratitude. Through discussions about relationships, wellbeing and community, children develop qualities that nurture spiritual growth alongside emotional resilience—helping them to flourish as compassionate and responsible individuals.
